If I dress as Living Dead Girl for Halloween, will you roll my coffin around?

Low ambulatory factor for that one, it's true. By the time you walked from the front door to the kitchen, the beer would be gone.

What? She can walk! It says so right in the title card.

That's not walking, that's... Well, whatever it is, it's not fast enough to get dibs on the beer, that's for sure.

And just who, precisely, would be so foolish as to get between a Wabbit and her beer?

(Besides, the projectionist is clearly undercranking the film when the Living Dead Girl is staggering around. Obviously too frightened to do his job correctly.)

I kind of want to dress up as Rob Zombie, personally.

I figured that part for the Platypus, myself. But if he won't do it, you could come down and help me stagger around.

Alas, I don't have the nose or the hands for it.

If you can take care of the hair and the clothes, most will not notice the difference. (Or so it seems to me.)

So how much is that video based upon 'the Cabinet of Doctor Caligari?'

I haven't seen the original, but recognized some bits (mostly the crazed architecture)

Rob Zombie appreciates the classics.

I saw the original last year during a self-imposed film-study group comprised of my husband and me. It's freaky -n- weird.

Liked this video though... can't say I have been a Rob Zombie fan, it was smarter than I'd feared it might be. If that makes sense.

He has some alarmingly danceable tunes.
